QUESTION 5

An NFS user currently has 30 MB of data stored in a personal directory on a VNX. Their quota allocation allows up to 100 MB. However, they are unable to store additional data in this personal directory.

The user deleted two of their largest files in an attempt to free up additional space, but was unable to save all new files to the VNX. The user called the VNX administrator, who confirmed that the file system has additional storage capacity.

What could be the problem?

- A. The file system is mounted as read only.
- B. Transmission errors occurred when the user's data was sent over the network.
- C. The user has insufficient permissions to write new data to the desired location.
- D. A quota was set for the maximum number of files allowed.

Correct Answer: D
