QUESTION 4

The difference between open and closed groups is:

- A. In an open group, confidentiality is valued less than in a closed group.
- B. Group members are allowed to drop out of an open group, but not a closed group.
- C. Group members need to be screened for closed groups, but not for open groups.
- D. No new members can join a closed group, whereas new members can join an open group at any time once they've been screened.

Correct Answer: D

In closed groups, the group typically ends with the same members it began with. New members are not allowed to join a closed group once the sessions have started, but members are allowed to drop out at any time. Counselors need to screen members for both open and closed groups. In open groups, new members can join in at any time once they've been screened. Regardless of the type of group, confidentiality is always an important aspect so that group members can trust one another and the counselor.

QUESTION 5

You have just launched a successful therapy group, and want to promote it to engage new clients so they, too, can benefit. You have asked your current therapy clients to offer an anonymous testimonial, telling others how useful it has been.

From an ethical standpoint, this is _____.

- A. prohibited under any circumstances
- B. allowed since it is a successful group that would benefit future clients that may join
- C. allowed, only if they sign a voluntary testimonial release
- D. prohibited unless they sign a voluntary testimonial release, use a pseudo-name and do not provide a photo

Correct Answer: A

The ACA Code of Ethics outlines that testimonials from clients, former clients or any other person vulnerable to undue influence is prohibited.
